Even though the gas mileage is not great, the drive is extremely smooth and quiet. It has a lot of interior room and very good suspension. It can hit 60 mph in around 8 seconds. It also has a surprisingly good off-road ability, which surprised me. I would recommend this vehicle to anyone who wants an SUV that will not break the bank. The e55 gives the ride a rough start, but can be very smooth once you've adjusted. It's known for squeaks on the steering wheel. The e55 has a 3rd row seat for the driver and 4 passengers. The seats are really comfortable and have very good leg room. The exterior is a bummer though, as it's done in a bland matte white. The Flexz have a 0-60 mph time of 7.5 seconds, in very good condition and have a very nice interior. They come with less of an interior than the e55, which I didn't like as much. They also have a slightly more flexible suspension and better off-roading. The XUV is an all-wheel drive SUV, which can be nice when driving on a dirt road. In the snow, it doesn't have much ability to pull you out of a snow bank. The XUV also has much better interior room than the e55, and a better suspension. I found the interior to be very nice, but could be a little better. It's definitely a little nicer looking than the e55. As a whole, the XUV and XZ are the best compact SUVs I've driven. They have a unique interior feel. Both the interior and exterior of the XUV are very nice and I enjoyed every aspect. The 2007 Ford Escape is a roomy and fun SUV to drive. It has a nice interior, comfortable seats, good handling and good fuel economy. The interior is a bit noisy, and the sound can be loud. It can be difficult to figure out how to unlock the keyless entry, and the locks on the doors are easy to pick. The 2006 Ford Escape is a great mid-size SUV, but I never liked it. The vehicle wasn't good to drive, and was incredibly noisy inside
